ng remarks in my report as secretary of the treasury in IS65: The great expansion of 1835 and 1836, ending the effects of which the country did not rally for ears, was the consequence of excessive bank cirlation and discounts, and an abuse of the credit system, stimulated in the first place by government deposits with the state banks, and swelled spirit of speculation which pervaded the country, that the country which should have been the great Importer of breadstuffs.

The same year I saw thousands of barrels of flour under the sheds of Snydam, Sage & Co. in New York which they were offering so low a price-$10 and $12 a head-that my brother thought that he would pack a few barrels of beef at Fort Wayne for the New York market. He did so, and was drawn upon by his consignees for a part of the expenses of transportation not covered by the sales. From 1837 to 1841 there was nothing to break the stagnation but the political calle enlisted for want of something else to do. In the fall of 1841 a reaction began to appear. The leadliest blow to the shipping of the United tates was in the substitution of iron for good in the construction of ships. What was eft of her foreign shipping was destroyed in the last civil war. Now, as no nation can be really great that is dependent upon other naade, one would suppose that the restoration of our foreign shipping which had been thus estroyed would long since have received the carnest attention of congress. But session after session has passed away, and nothing ans been accomplished in this direction, while the difficulties to be overcome have been steadily increasing. The United States can certainly do what other nations ve successfully accomplished in a matter of eat national importance.

The indifference with which western cor essmen and western journals regard our eign shipping interest may not be surprisas they are mainly interested in the de opment of their own section; but it is surrising that so little interest in it is felt by opresentatives from the seaboard states, and the journals which are published in our nercial cities. No man knows better than he ought to know that the restoration of our foreig shipping is a matter of great national con ern, and yet in reply to an inquiry that made of him he replied that "the restoration of our merchant marine is a matter of la portance to the country, but only on cond ion that it pays its own wny; that the public might as well be taxed to revivo the agricultural interests of Vermout as to restor our merchant marine." Here is an editor of a great newspaper in a great commercial city of the Union who thinks that the govment might as well be taxed to improve the agricultural interests of Vermoat as to be taxed to revive our foreign merchant marine, the revival of which would add largely to he national wealth, and is essential to the well being of the country, who thinks the the restoration of our merchant marine is of importance to the country, but only on the condition that it pays its own way, its importance to the country being dependent upon interested in it. The letters which were received by the London firm from its New York partners were encouraging; and I had no reason to expect anything but a pleasant visit to myold home, and a return to London under auspicious circumstances. But on the arrival of the stanniship in the outer harbor I was met by the stunning intelligence that my American part. B. B. E. (Botanie Blood Balm.)
